

URGENT: Experienced Vet Seeking Conservation / Grazing Land for Aberdeen Angus and White Park Cattle

I am a fully qualified veterinary surgeon with many years of practical cattle management experience and am urgently seeking conservation, rewilding, or low-input grazing land for a small herd of Aberdeen Angus and traditional White Park cattle.

The cattle are calm, hardy native breeds ideally suited to conservation grazing. They thrive on species-rich pasture and are widely recognised for their positive role in supporting biodiversity, habitat structure, and ecological restoration.

I offer:

- Full professional oversight of herd health, welfare, and grazing management
- Quiet, well-managed native cattle suited to sensitive environments
- Flexible, collaborative approach aligned with landowner or estate objectives
- Experience working with conservation-focused land and extensive systems
- Minimal infrastructure requirements

I am happy to discuss a range of arrangements including grazing licences, conservation partnerships, or longer-term stewardship roles.

Due to the hands-on nature of herd management, simple nearby or on-site accommodation would be required.

Timescale is urgent (within the next month), so I would be very grateful for any leads, introductions, or conversations.
